CLASS 1331  Elementary Sanskrit I  X-List: SANSK 1131/ LING 1131
351-266  Class #: 6319  4 credits.  MTRF  11:15-12:05  Ruppel, A.  Room GSH 122
An introduction to the essentials of Sanskrit grammar. Designed to enable the student to read classical and epic Sanskrit as quickly as possible.

CLASS 1531  FWS: Greek Myth  X-List:
361-732  Class #: Below.  3 credits.  Room See below.
The course will focus on the stories about the gods and heroes of the Greeks as they appear in the works of ancient Greek literature. We will read a selection from Greek authors, inquiring into the relationship between myths and cultural, religious, and political realia of the society in which they were shaped and perpetuated. Alongside the primary texts, we will read a number of recent scholarly works on the subject. We will start by discussing myths in general terms (theories, basic concepts) and will proceed toward the analysis of individual stories and cycles. This fascinating material will serve as a vehicle for improving your written communication skills. Assignments will include preparatory writing and six essays focusing on our readings and discussions in class.

SEM 102 - (Class #16579 ) - E. Kenyon - MWF 1:25-2:15, LNC 117

CLASS 1533  FWS: History of Reading  X-List:
364-506  Class #: 16581  3 credits.  MWF  2:30-3:20  Huelsenbeck, B.  Room LNC 117
The digital age is upon us, and the book (some say) is dying. Is it true? The Greek philosopher Plato warned of negative effects on people’s memory and ability to communicate caused by the technology of writing. The printing press revolutionized the spread of information. What are digital technologies doing to us—to how we read, behave, and think? In considering these questions, students will survey reading practices and their material supports (from stone to paper to the computer screen) across the millennia. Readings may include: Marshall McLuhan, Lev Manovich (The Language of New Media), and Robert Darnton (The Case for Books). Writing assignments will require assessment of arguments found in assigned readings, synthesis of historical data, and analysis of visual materials.

CLASS 2351  Intermediate Sanskrit  X-List: LING 2251/SANSK 2251
351-268  Class #: 6804  3 credits.  TBA  Staff  Room
Prerequisite: CLASS 1132 or equivalent
Satisfies Option 1.

CLASS 2601  The Greek Experience  X-List:
352-306  Class #: 14677  3 credits.  TR  1:25-2:40  Ahl, F.  Room RCK 132
An introduction to the literature and thought of ancient Greece. Topics will include epic and lyric poetry, tragedy and comedy, and historical, political, philosophical, and scientific writings. Some attention will also be given to the daily life of ordinary citizens, supplemented by slides of ancient art and architecture.
Optional study groups:
Initiation to Greek Culture

Limited to 18 students. Intended especially for first-year students. Students must apply in writing to chair, Department of Classics, 120 Goldwin Smith Hall. Knowledge of Greek or Latin is not necessary, since all texts are in translation. What is necessary is the willingness to participate in three one-hour seminars each week and also a supplementary one- or two-hour session, during which the class participates in workshops with specially invited guests. This course covers a wide range of Greek literary and philosophical works as well as modern critical and philosophical writings on the Greeks. The focus throughout is on the status of language, the many forms of discourse that appear in the literature, and the attempts the Greeks themselves made to overcome the perceived inadequacies and difficulties inherent in language as the medium of poetry and philosophy. The course inquires into the development of philosophy in the context of a culture infused with traditional, mythological accounts of the cosmos. It asks how poetic forms such as tragedy responded to and made an accommodation with philosophical discourse while creating an intense emotional effect on the audience; and discusses how these issues persist and are formulated in our own thinking.

Greek Mythology

A survey of the Greek myths, with emphasis on the content and significance of the myths in Mediterranean society, including the place of myth in Greek life and consciousness; the factors and influences involved in the creation of myths; and the use of myths for our understanding of Greek literature, religion, and moral and political concepts.

Paranoia and Conspiracy

Conspiracy theory pervades the literature of the ancient world, from Greek drama to Roman history. Historical writers of Ancient Greece and Rome often resort to paranoid and conspiratorial modes of analysis to explain why things happen the way they do. This course examines actual conspiracies in these societies alongside fictional representations of them in a range of texts, together with the rhetoric of self-delusion and fearmongering in which they are couched. Readings include selections from Homer’s Odyssey, Greek tragedy, Roman comedy, and Greek and Roman historians. Modern theories will also be considered.

The History of Ancient Mesopotamia

This is a basic survey course introducing students to the history of Mesopotamia (Sumer, Babylonia, and Assyria) from the earliest periods to the death of Alexander the Great.

Military Campaigns and Theory in the Ancient World

This course covers both the practice and the theory of ancient warfare. By a “Military Campaign” we mean a series of engagements designed to accomplish strategic (i.e., larger military-political) goals. By “Military Theory” we mean thought concerning warfare, in the widest possible sense. To channel the two streams, we will study representative documents from the periods into which the ancient world is conventionally divided, from the Middle Bronze Age (2100-1600 BC) to the last years of the Roman Empire (the fifth century AD).

Egyptomania

Imagining Egypt in the Greco-Roman World. Throughout Greek and Roman history, the idea of Egypt inspired powerful imaginative responses ranging from fascination to fear. From the earliest Egyptian-Aegean trade to the ultimate association of Isis and Sarapis with Roman imperial cult, this course tracks the evolution of Egyptian interactions with the Greco-Roman world and the corresponding changes in Greek and Roman attitudes towards Egypt. Ultimately, these shifting representations of Egypt point to changes not only in the ways Greeks and Romans viewed the land of the Nile, but also in the ways they conceived of their own societies and cultural identities. Finally, we will also address images of Egypt in modern popular culture; how have Greco-Roman portrayals of Egypt helped shape today’s view of the Pharaonic world?

Advanced Sanskrit I

Pre-requisites: 2 years of Sanskrit or equivalent.
Readings in Sanskrit at the third level and above. Topics vary.

Sages and Satirists, Pirates and Pilgrims

The second century CE was at once the "most happy and prosperous" period of human history (Gibbon), and an "Age of Anxiety" (E. R. Dodds). This course will examine how the struggle between skepticism and belief in a world of opportunity and danger played itself out in the pages of (mostly) Greek popular literature, for example in doubts about traditional religion (oracles, mockery of myth, unmasking of charlatans), strategies for reviving belief (retreat, personal faith, travel, Christianity), or systems of prediction (dreams, physiognomy). We will conclude by studying two historical accounts of travelling missionaries (Acts of the Apostles and The Life of Apollonius of Tyana), and two novels of self-discovery (Apuleius' Metamorphoses and Heliodorus' Ethiopica). Selections (all in English) from Dio Chrysostom, Plutarch, Lucian and Philostratus among others (Aelius Aristides, Pausanias, Artemidorus, Justin Martyr, Galen, Marcus Aurelius, Clement of Alexandria).

History & Literature of Early Christianity

This course traces the historical development of Christianity from its roots in 1st century Palestinian Judaism to the emergence of Islam in the early 7th century. The focus will be on exploring the rich diversity of Christianity by reading a wide range of primary literary sources—selections from the New Testament, church fathers, Gnostic writings, monastic literature, and much more—and studying the material culture through archaeology, art, inscriptions, and papyri. Special attention will be given to the ways in which Christianity in different regions around the Mediterranean interfaced with paganism, Judaism, and Islam.

The Archaeology of the City of Rome

This lecture class is a history of Rome and its Empire from 700 BCE to 400 CE told through the urban image of the capital itself. Besides a chronological and topographical overview of the city's development main emphasis will be on five aspects of the urban space: the relationship of power, ritual and space (for a, the most important temples, the residences and funerary monuments of the emperors, finally the churches); entertainment and public spectacle (baths, the Colosseum, theaters); economy and trade (storehouses at Tiber, Monte Testaccio, Rome's harbor Ostia); the infrastructure (Cloaca maxima, aqueducts, city quarters), and the boundaries of the city (the pomerium, the city walls, roads leading into the city).

Intro to Dendrochronology

By permission only. Two labs (Class ID: 9009) TBA
Introduction and training in dendrochronology and its application to archaeology, art history, and environment through participation in a research project dating ancient to modern tree-ring samples especially from the Mediterranean. Supervised reading and laboratory/project work. A possibility exists for summer fieldwork in the Mediterranean. LAB to be arranged (Class ID 6679)
In March of 486 BCE the festival of Dionysus at Athens introduced a new performance-genre, the komodoi, destined to be the ancestor of all subsequent western comedy. This course will use the eleven preserved plays of Aristophanes (in English translations) and substantial fragments of contemporary comic writers (Cratinus, Pherecrites, Eupolis) to anatomize the ancient comic genre. Topics will include modern theories (anthropological, philosophical, ritual) of what "original" comedy should be vs. realities (political and theatrical) of what it actually was; survivals of early forms of music and verse, costuming, staging; settings (public vs. domestic, earthly vs. otherworldly, utopias vs. dystopias), the sociology of its characters (common men, uncommon women, gods and heroes, animals, abstractions); the life of the city ("politics" in the Greek sense), particularly comedy's political discourse compared to Athenian public speeches; domestic topics (conflicts in marriage, parenting and education). Concluding with the "little world" into which Old Comedy is shrunk by Menander at the end of the 4th century, but also its non-dramatic legacy as a source for ancient scholarship, ancient and renaissance satire, until its revival in modern political theater. All source readings available in English (there will be an optional separate meeting for those wishing to read some texts in the original); but ability to read secondary literature in a modern European language is desirable and will assist greatly with the final research paper. Some previous coursework in either Greek history or literature or general theater history is desirable.

Latin in Review

Prerequisite: Placement by departmental examination.
This course is designed to accommodate students who have had some Latin, but are insufficiently prepared to take 1202. It will begin with review of some material covered in 1201 and will then continue with second-term Latin material. The class moves swiftly. Work will include extensive memorization of vocabulary and paradigms, study of Latin syntax, and written homework, quizzes, tests, and oral drills. Students should be ready for Latin 1205 by the end of the course, but may take LATIN 2201 if they pass with A- or better.

Intermediate Latin I

Prerequisites: LATIN 1202, 1203, 1204, or placement by departmental exam.
Satisfies Option 2. Introduces students to reading a literary Latin text (Ovid, Ars Amatoria I). The course covers complex syntax and reviews the grammar presented in LATIN 1202, 1203, or 1204.

Latin Prose

Prerequisite: LATIN 1205 or grade of A- or above in LATIN 1202, 1203, 1204 or placement by departmental exam.
Satisfies Option 1. Readings from Cicero's Philippics - his fierce denunciations of Mark Antony, delivered after the assassination of Julius Caesar. We will read these speeches with close attention to their rhetorical style and historical context, discovering the reasons for their political potency, which led directly to Cicero's own politically-motivated murder.

Virgil

We will read in Latin selections from Virgil's Eclogues and Georgics and, in English translation, selections from his chief Greek models, Theocritus and Hesiod. Discussion will focus on the poems in their historical and literary context and on Virgil's language, meter, and poetic technique.

Roman Poetry

Satisfies Option 1.
Prerequisite: One term of 2000-level Latin or permission of instructor.
Topic: Virgil and Ovid

Interpretation and Exegesis.
This course will examine exegetical strategies in Medieval Latin across multiple genres and periods, including biblical, literary, art-historical, legal, philosophical, and historical examples that range from Augustine to Boccaccio. We will focus primarily on texts that, in addition to offering examples of exegesis in action, directly confront and theorize exegetical methods and ends. Weekly class meetings will be divided between a two-hour lecture/discussion and a one-hour close reading of select passages. A basic foundation in Latin morphology, syntax, and vocabulary is assumed. Intermediate and advanced topics in post-Classical idioms and syntax will be treated as they arise, with the goal of improving the facility with which students approach, read, and, especially, understand Latin writings from the Middle Ages.
