Class ID: 2726
4 credits.
MTRF 10:10-11:00
Ruppel, A.
Room GSH 122
Prerequisite: CLASS 1331. Sanskrit /Linguistics 1131 or equivalent.
An introduction to the essentials of Sanskrit grammar. Designed to enable the student to read classical and epic Sanskrit as quickly as possible.

CLASS 1531
FWS: Greek Myth
361-732
Class ID: 9935
3 credits.
MWF 8:00-8:50
Ivanov, R.
Room BAL 3331
"The course will introduce you to a large corpus of traditional stories about the gods and heroes of the Greeks as they appear in the works of ancient Greek literature (Epic, Drama, and Lyric). We will read a broad selection from Greek authors, inquiring into the relationship between myths and cultural, religious, and political realia of the society in which they were shaped and perpetuated. Alongside the primary texts, we will read a number of recent scholarly works. We will start by discussing myths in rather general terms (theories of myths, basic concepts). Then we will proceed toward the analysis of individual stories and cycles. This fascinating material will serve as a vehicle for improving your written communication skills. Writing assignments will include brief preparatory assignments and six essays focusing on the assigned readings and discussions in class."

CLASS 1699
English Words: Histories
357-523
Class ID: 3417
3 credits.
MWF 2:30-3:20
Rosen, C.
Room BKL 119
Where do the words we use come from? This course examines the history and structure of the English vocabulary from its distant Indo-European roots to the latest in technical jargon and slang. Topics include formal and semantic change, taboo and euphemism, borrowing new words from old, "learned" English loans from Greek and Latin, slang, and society.

CLASS 2352
Intermediate Sanskrit II
357-709
Class ID: 2737
3 credits.
MWF 1:25-2:15

CLASS 2632
Paranoia and Conspiracy
361-706
Class ID: 2720
3 credits.
TR 11:40-12:55
Fontaine, M.
Room URH 262
Conspiracy theory pervades the literature of the ancient world, from Greek drama to Roman history. Historical writers of Ancient Greece and Rome often resort to paranoid and conspiratorial modes of analysis to explain why things happen the way they do. This course examines actual conspiracies in these societies alongside fictional representations of them in a range of texts, together with the rhetoric of self-delusion and fearmongering in which they are couched. Readings include selections from Homer's Odyssey, Greek tragedy, Roman comedy, and Greek and Roman historians. Modern theories will also be considered.

CLASS 2634
Judaism from Persian Period to the Rise of Islam
362-140
Class ID: 4389
4 credits.
MWF 11:15-12:05
Jovanovic, L.
Room WHT 104
In this introductory course we will trace continuity and change, dispersion and diversification of Judaism as it interacted with other cultures under Persian, Hellenistic, Roman, Byzantine, and Sasanian rules, with special attention being laid on the great centers in Palestine, Egypt, and Babylonia. This period spans from the formation of Judaism(s) during the Persian Empire to the advent of Islam in the seventh century c.e., by which time Rabbinic Judaism had, principally through its discourse and conflict with early Christianity, asserted itself as the dominant and most well-defined strand of Judaism. The main focus will be on reading the primary sources in English translation including extracts from Biblical and extra-Biblical literature, Josephus, the Mishnah, and the Talmud.
The Comic Theater

Class ID: 2682 3 credits. MW 1:25-2:15 Rusten, J. Room GSH G64

TA: Erica Bexley
The origins of comic drama in ancient Greece and Rome, and its subsequent incarnations especially in the Italian renaissance (Commedia erudita and Commedia dell'arte), Elizabethan England, seventeenth-century France, the English Restoration, and Hollywood in the thirties and forties. Chief topics will be: the growth of the comic theatrical tradition and conventions; techniques and themes of comic plots (trickster, parody, farce, caricature); and the role of comedy in society. All readings are in English.

2743 Archaeology/Roman Private Life

Class ID: 2698 3 credits. TR 11:40-12:55 Alexandridis, A Room GSH G22

What was it like to live in the Roman world? What did that world look, taste and smell like? How did Romans raise their families, entertain themselves, understand death, and interact with their government? This course takes as its subject the everyday lives of individuals and explores those lives using the combined tools of archaeology, art, as well as some primary source readings. Some of the topics explored will include the Roman house, urbanism, bathing and hygiene, entertainment, attitudes to sex and sexuality, self-display and emotion, religion, and death.

3642 Greeks, Romans, and Victorians

Class ID: 2701 4 credits. TR 10:10-11:25 Ahl, F. Room URH 369

This course explores how nineteenth-century (and especially Victorian English and Irish) poets, dramatists, and to a lesser extent, novelists, present Greco-Roman antiquity. The varied influences of Vergil and Homer, Seneca and Sophocles, Plautus and Aristophanes, Horace, and Greek lyric poetry will be discussed in selected works of Thomas Moore, Shelley, Byron, Swinburne, W. S. Gilbert, Oscar Wilde, and the pre-Raphaelites and Victorian poets.

Class ID:
3643 Greek & Roman Mystery Cults & Early Christianity

Class ID: 2705 4 credits. MWF 10:10-11:00 Clinton, K. Room GSH G22

A previous course in Classics (civilization or language) or Religious Studies is recommended. A study of the controversial question of religious continuity between paganism and early Christianity. After a brief survey of classical mystery cults and Hellenistic religion, the course will focus on such Hellenistic and Roman cults as the mystery cults of Isis, Bacchus, Mithras, and Attis and the Great Mother and on the distinctive features that contributed to their success. Discussion of Christian liturgy and beliefs to determine what Christianity owed to its pagan predecessors and to isolate the factors that contributed to its triumph over the "rival" pagan cults of late antiquity.
Aristotle

An examination of the philosophical significance of Aristotle’s major works, especially in natural philosophy, philosophy of mind, and metaphysics.

Independent Study in Classical Civilization

Permission of DUS, in extraordinary circumstances only.

Theater and Spectacle in Greece and Rome

A study not of the play-texts, but of the social history of the richly documented tradition of competitive artistic performances sponsored by rulers, cities and wealthy individuals, with special attention to the ongoing connections and cross-influences with athletic competitions. The organization is thematic rather than chronological: we will take our comparative material from the fifth century BCE to the late Roman empire. Topics include organizational frameworks, funding sources, associations of performers and their ideologies and rivalries, regulation and hierarchies of audiences, public claques, the adaptation of performance to political events, influence on art of stage and spectacle, and institutional and intellectual opposition to performance and spectacle. Evidence will include ancient treatises, inscriptions, mosaics, wall-paintings and terracottas. All source readings will be available in English (there will be an optional separate meeting for those wishing to read some texts in the original).

The Ancient Economy

How did ancient Greek and Roman societies produce and exchange goods? How did they move and trade those goods, sometimes huge distances? How did they mint and manage money? Did ancient societies have anything that could be recognized as “economies”? This course examines what we know about ancient exchange, trade and monetary systems. It will look principally at the Roman world, but with some discussion of Greek problems and frequent reference to general theoretical issues. Some of the themes covered will be: ancient mints, the army and the economy, transport containers and the archaeology of trade; ships and shipwrecks; land use and management; and taxation. Undergraduates should contact the professor prior to registration.

Topics in Ancient Philosophy

Advanced discussion of some important figures and movements in Ancient Philosophy. Specific texts and topics vary from year to year.

Honors Course: Senior Essay

An advisor must be chosen by the end of the student's sixth semester. Topics must be approved by the Standing Committee on Honors by the beginning of the seventh semester. See "Honors," Classics front matter.

Images of Women in Antiquity

Gender Studies for the ancient Greek and Roman world have focused either on a social history of women or on difference. This seminar will combine both approaches with specific emphasis on images (visual and textual) or women and the methods of their interpretation. We will discuss representations of women from all social classes, the public and private lives of women, concepts of the female body as well as female figures (heroines and monsters) in myth.

In this seminar we will look at archaeological and textual evidence from one of the longest-running excavations in the Near East: the ancient city of Ugarit at Tell Ras Shamra in northwestern Syria. Students will review the archaeological history of this coastal kingdom that has its roots deep in Levantine prehistory. Then we will study the textual material emerging from the thousands of clay tablets inscribed in alphabetic Ugaritic and cuneiform Babylonian that vividly illuminate matters of cult, economy, law, and daily life in a Late Bronze Age city during the 14th -12th centuries BCE. Students will read a sample of these texts, in translation or the original (for credit in 6644), to gain insights into the life of a cosmopolitan center that managed to thrive while surrounded by territorial empires during history’s first truly international age.

This course will consider three interrelated topics: the forms, content, and purposes of Latin verse in Christian Europe; how those verse forms were taught; and the relationship between changes in the Latin language and developments in versification. Verse readings will include hymnody and lyrics of late antiquity; the cento; acrostics and carmina figurata; a range of accentual verse forms from early medieval Ireland to the 12th century; and examples of new embellishments to the hexameter. We will sample metrical treatises including the first handbooks of Latin versification written for non-native speakers and examples of the later medieval ars versificandi. Topics will include the relationship between verse and the liturgy; prosimetra and macaronic verse; didactic verse; changes in Latin and vernacular prosody and the reception of quantitative meters; and the revival of classical lyric meters at the end of the Middle Ages.

353-938  Class ID: 7533  4  credits.  TR  10:10-11:25  Ruff, C.  Room URH 494
Latin Paleography will be devoted in approximately equal measure to the dating, localization, and reading of scripts, and to codicological methods in the study of medieval manuscripts. The primary emphasis will be on Latin book hands from late antiquity to the invention of printing, but students with interests in earlier or later periods or vernacular texts will have a chance to work on projects in their areas of specialization. We will also spend some time on current manuscript-based research in ancient and medieval literacy and the informational structure of the manuscript page (word division, punctuation, layout, apparatus, glossing, etc.).
